Hi Courtney,

Here's the info you requested:

- 1) Corporation filings (BF Labs Inc.): Scan attached (2 pages).
- 2) Federal tax registration: Scan attached.
- 3) Clarification on the export control legality for our technology: After consulting with the Commerce department in Washington, DC, we received confirmation that our processors are classified as Cat-5 Part-2 "5A992" (authentication hardware) and as of 2009 we are not required to have an export control license or undergo examination because our class of technology is exempt under authority of paragraph (b)(1) of the US Bureau of Industry and Security License Exception ENC.

English translation: Basically, what this means is that there's an allowance for encryption products that don't actually encrypt or decrypt... but who's function is only to verify the integrity of things that have already been encrypted. As such, they don't have the potential to be used in a threatening way and aren't subject to regulation. Here's more reading on the subject if you're interested:
http://www.bis.doc.gov/encryption/enc\_faqs.htm

4) Missouri state business license: We're currently working with local law firm Polsinelli Shughart to resolve this issue. They are the guys who did US Sprint's local filings and are doing a full re-structuring of our company to make sure we're in full compliance. Unfortunately, it's not yet done. I'll forward the filings when they're complete.

5) Taxes: You didn't ask, but I'm proud to tell you that we've already sent a $100,000 check to the IRS as a first payment towards withholding for earnings taxes. Employee taxes are being paid as well.

Regards,
Sonny
